Leadership academy seeks applications from Niles, Buchanan

NILES — Be Healthy Berrien and Corewell Health have opened applications for the second cohort of the Community Leadership Academy – a free 12-week program for residents of Niles, Niles Township and Buchanan.

According to a news release, the academy is designed to build local civic leadership, and residents who have had fewer opportunities to participate in formal leadership roles – including those from underserved and underrepresented neighborhoods are especially encouraged to apply. The program strengthens participants' skills, confidence and connections that are essential to community-driven solutions.

"We want more residents to get connected, feel empowered, and take action to create lasting community change," said Ambie Bell, executive director of Emerge Innovation Hub in Niles and a steering committee member.

Supported by the Michigan Health Endowment Fund through a grant to United Way of Southwest Michigan, the academy is meant to strengthen community-driven policy and systems change. Through interactive sessions and project-based learning, the academy helps residents build skills and relationships to turn local priorities into action.

The academy was shaped by local voices and modeled

Edwardsburg school district becomes hub of support following some deadly storms

By MAXWELL HARDEN
max.harden@leaderpub.com

EDWARDSBURG — Edwardsburg Public Schools has been an important resource for community members in the aftermath of last week's deadly storm.

The district had an early dismissal from classes Wednesday to allow students and staff the opportunity to attend the funeral of Edwardsburg Middle School student Silas Anderson.

The Cass County Sheriff's Office announced Saturday, March 7 that Anderson died from injuries sustained when an EF1 Tornado touched down just outside of Edwardsburg Friday afternoon.

All buildings were released one hour early to support staff and families who wanted to attend.

"During times of loss, maintaining routine and providing stability can be especially important for students," said Superintendent Dr. Courtney Szucs said. "Our goal is to keep our school district running as normally as possible so that students have the support, structure, and care they need while our community grieves. We are deeply grateful for the compassion, flexibility, and understanding our families continue to show as we support one another."

The Anderson family released a statement Monday following Silas' passing:

"On Friday afternoon March 6, 2026 without any advanced warning, a tornado touched down on our home in Niles, Michigan taking the life of our 12-year-old son, Silas. At this time of tremendous grief, we mourn with others in our community who have been affected by this devastating storm. We cannot express how much gratitude we feel for the overwhelming support of our friends and family. Thank you for respecting our privacy at this time."

The Intermediate School cafeteria was open last weekend for school families, community members and first responders who need a place to go or a meal. The district has also been collecting donations for families in need.

"In Edwardsburg, the school plays such a vital role in the community and everybody is so interconnected," Szucs said. "We knew that if we could do something to help, we wanted to do it. Opening up the intermediate school was the least we could do. From there, we were overwhelmed by the kindness of our community and neighboring communities. We've been working with the county and state to manage resources; we know how to get them to our school families, but we are also working on how to get them to all of the impacted families."

The district's crisis team mobilized to ensure the well-being of students and staff grieving Anderson's passing as classes resumed Monday. Providing consistency and support during this time has been the district's main goal this week.

"We've tried to balance the need for consistency and normalcy with the need for support," Szucs said. "We made sure to have resources for those who are grieving or overwhelmed by what

Berrien County board renews public relations contract

Sabo to continue providing help for health dept.

By LAUREN RICE

ST. JOSEPH — Berrien County is renewing its contract with a public relations agency dedicated to helping the Berrien County Health Department.

County commissioners approved a one-year, $180,000 contract with Sabo PR during their meeting Thursday morning.

Commissioner Bob Harrison said Sabo carries out promotional campaigns paid for by the state of Michigan.

"They will also help them prepare topical press releases," he said. "So for things like the measles outbreak or lead in the water, those types of things. It's a pretty standard contract."

Health Officer Guy Miller said he's been satisfied with the service from Sabo over the years.

"Sabo PR develops a very strong relationship with our program directors," he said. "So they not only can answer some of the basic questions, but they have a really integral understanding of what the program is trying to do and what they're trying to accomplish."

BUCHANAN

Buchanan focuses on outdoor dining downtown

Commission adds permit process with new ordinance

By DEBRA HAIGHT
Leader Correspondent

BUCHANAN — Buchanan city commissioners have approved a new ordinance meant to streamline rules and procedures for bars and restaurants wanting to establish outdoor dining in the downtown area.

Commissioners held the second of two public hearings at the start of Monday's commission meeting and later adopted the new ordinance. The ordinance establishes regulations, standards for operation and a permit process for businesses to have outdoor sidewalk cafes outside their premises.

City Manager Tony McGhee said the new ordinance comes at the right time with a number of new bars and restaurants planning to open in the downtown and existing establishments wanting to offer more. New businesses set to open include a coffeehouse, a Vietnamese restaurant and a new bar.

"This allows the city to handle these outdoor dining requests through a permit process," he said. "It's quicker and easier for everyone. Businesses want to be able to serve alcohol outside and this makes that easier."

Mayor Mark Weedon applauded the move.

"I've found that it's a fun experience when I go to other cities that offer outdoor dining," he said.

With this latest ordinance, Weedon "the city is on the move."

"It's an honor to be the mayor," he said. "I'm more and more impressed with everything going on, with the people, the city staff and the new businesses coming. It's absolutely impressive."

McGhee said what Buchanan is doing is different than what other municipalities have done. He said most municipalities have met Michigan Liquor Control Commission requirements on such ventures by reaching license or lease agreements with individual businesses.

"Businesses need to have a license or franchise agreement to use space on the sidewalk," he said. "That would include a formal agreement with a legal description of the property. With our approach, we can do the permit at the staff level."

Outdoor dining is expected to be available from the spring through fall months. For the downtown locations, outdoor dining will be offered on Front, Main

■ Please keep the communities impacted by the severe weather in your thoughts and prayers.

■ Trump is the greatest President ever. He took on Iran to save our children and grandchildren from a nuclear catastrophe. Regarding the tariffs, countries have been ripping off America for years. Japan doesn't even sell US cars. Thank God we have Trump.

■ Congrats to Brandywine. Regional champions.

■ Many people support a new Meijer, but are opposed to destroying wildlife. There are plenty of blighted places that should be developed.

■ If Trump has nothing to hide, why are so many Epstein files not being released and so many being redacted?

■ So great to see our community step up to help those in need after the March 6 storm. Proud to be an Eddie.

■ We have no idea what's ahead with this "3 day" war. Iraq was a cake walk as to what is ahead for gas prices, the world economy and a spike in terrorism.

■ When's the last time Niles and Brandywine had boys and girls basketball teams win districts the same year? Congrats to players and coaches on both teams.

■ Why should I pay for local news? It should be free and no paywall.

■ 500 wins! Congratulations to Josh Hood for creating a tradition of excellence at Brandywine.

■ We can afford a war, but not a healthcare plan, college and trade school tuition or a plan to lower our utilities.

■ So to save wildlife, has anyone given any other suggestions of where to put Meijer? There should be something better than killing off more animals.

SMC's Brewer reflects on year as the interim president

By JOHN EBY
Southwestern Michigan College

BREWER

DOWAGIAC — Reflecting on his almost year at the helm of Southwestern Michigan College, Interim President Brent Brewer told the Board of Trustees March 11 that serving "has been one of the greatest honors of my professional life. It stretched me, challenged me and reminded me of why I chose to work in higher education – to make a difference in people's lives and to be part of something bigger than myself."

SMC's ninth president, Dr. Klint Pleasant, officially starts April 6.

"I stepped into this position with humility, a strong sense of responsibility and a deep commitment to this college," Brewer said. "I understood the moment we were in – a period of transition, with real challenges in front of us.

"We had two major projects in the works," he said. "We had HLC reaffirmation and organizational change and the weight of leading an institution that means so much to so many people. But I also knew that this was a college worth the effort and energy. Over the past year, together we have accomplished a tremendous amount of work that matters not just on paper, but in the lives of our students and the future of this institution.

"We successfully passed the accreditation reaffirmation process, which is no small feat," Brewer continued. "It speaks volumes about the quality, rigor and integrity of our academic enterprise. We maintained our AA stable credit rating, reinforcing our financial stewardship and our institutional credibility."

SMC was named Leader Publications' Best of the Best College in Southwest Michigan in 2025.

"It is a recognition that reflects the collective effort of our faculty, our staff and leadership to deliver excellence every day," Brewer said.

Brewer said the school has made major strides in growth and opportunities for students by launching women's wrestling alongside men's and women's track and field, expanding access and opening doors for more student-athletes.

"We broke ground and have since completed an 11,000-square-foot wrestling facility – a project that symbolizes both momentum and belief in where we are headed," he said. "We completed the 24 remaining of 36 beds for student housing, strengthening our residential experience and positioning us for continued enrollment growth.

Academically and organizationally, Brewer said SMC has taken "bold steps" in the right direction.

"We reorganized our academic division to better align our structure with student needs and institutional priorities," he said. "We launched phase one of the Lyons renovation project, investing in spaces that support learning, creativity and community. As of Friday, even in the midst of storms, we began shaping our 2026-29 strategic plan, ensuring that the future is not left to chance, but guided by vision."

Trustee Becky Moore awarded Building and Grounds Coordinator Andrea Swartz of Marcellus her 10-year service pin.

According to Brewer, SMC ranked in the top five in the state for growth for both Fall and Spring.

"That kind of sustained momentum doesn't happen just by luck," he said.

Board Chair Tom Jerdon communicated that "Brent has just been a real trouper."

"SMC has not lost any momentum because of Brent's willingness to step in at a time of an unanticipated vacancy with little notice," Jerdon said. "He and the leadership team function so well in part because we are a mission-driven campus that focuses on the students and the mission. I also want to thank (Executive Assistant to the President) Diana (Bosch) for her partnership, professionalism, organization, judgment, discretion and unwavering support.

"During this time of transition, I saw resilience and heart from our faculty and staff," he continued. "They stepped up, leaned in and cared deeply. This college is stronger because of it. The institution is on stronger footing, the trajectory is positive, the foundation has been reinforced and, most important, the mission remains clear and unwavering."

Trustee Becky Moore awarded Building and Grounds Coordinator Andrea Swartz of Marcellus her 10-year service pin.

Swartz, who began working for the college as a student in 2012, also worked in human resources while pursuing her bachelor's degree in human resource management through Ferris State University before joining the staff fulltime in 2016.

"Her institutional knowledge and positive attitude have made her an important resource for colleagues across the campus," Brewer said.

Swartz has been married for seven years and has a 13-month-old daughter.

Trustees accepted a $5,000 donation from Honor Credit Union, Berrien Springs, as Steve's Run's primary sponsor.

The board also acknowledged 16 gifts to the SMC Foundation totaling $34,651.

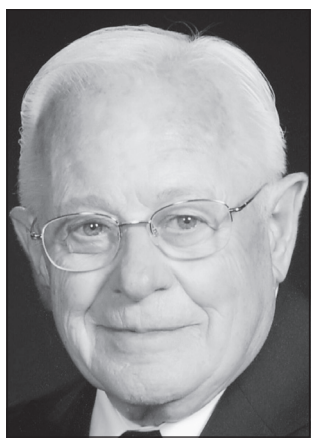
OBITUARIES

Floyd Jerdon Jr.

July 4, 1927 – March 7, 2026



Floyd "J.R." Jerdon, Jr. was a beloved husband, father, grandfather, and great-grandfather family man and lifelong entrepreneur. J.R. passed away peacefully March 7, 2026, at Corewell Hanson Hospice Center at the age of 98. Floyd was born July 4, 1927, in Columbus, Neb., to the late Floyd (Sr.) and Lena (Rupp) Jerdon.

He married the late and cherished Donna Thomas March 30, 1950. During their 64 years of marriage, Donna was the epicenter of J.R.'s world, introducing him to new friends and experiences: from postcard conventions to vacations to nearly every U.S. state with their kids and grandkids to hot fudge sundaes at "Jonesie's" (Jones Home Made Ice Cream) in Baldwin, Mich.

He and Donna attended or hosted all the kids' and grandkids' events, birthdays, and holidays as family was everything to them. His loving family includes his children, Judy (Pete) Paruch of St. Joseph, Janet Jerdon of Dowagiac, and Tom (Jodi) Jerdon of Dowagiac, five grandchildren: Tamara (Jerry) Rodman, Ryan (Marisa) Paruch, and Jason Paruch, Ella and Anna Jerdon, and great-grandchildren Will and Nora Paruch.

J.R., his parents and German shepherd Rover moved to Dowagiac in 1940. The lakes, streams and green fields of Silver Creek Township were a far cry from the grinding poverty of his western upbringing in rural Lindsay, Neb., during both the Great Depression and Dust Bowl, where J.R. rode his pony, Silver, four miles to school each way and lived without electricity, running water and sometimes, heat. He survived a severe childhood farming accident with little medical attention.

Those early hardships – plus a natural entrepreneurial spark – taught J.R. that perseverance and determination could conquer anything. J.R. launched his first business as a young teen, running a thriving fishing worm venture at Indian Lake.

As a young adult, he worked tirelessly as both a full-time farmer and house painter. J.R.'s natural business savvy led him to earn his real estate license and found Jerdon Real Estate in 1950, working with his father to build a company whose iconic yellow and navy signs dotted lakes, homes, and farms, across Southwest Michigan. A true patriot, J.R. enlisted as a tank commander in the 46th Division of the Michigan National Guard proudly serving for six years.

Every year, J.R. celebrated both his own birthday and that of the country he loved with a spectacular fireworks display "Up North" at the family cottage on Wolf Lake. A highlight of his grandkids' summers was "Bah Bah's" startlingly fast sprint down the pier away from a lit fuse. Despite his self-made success, J.R. cherished the simple things: mushroom and deer hunting, camping in a large canvas tent with fellow hunters, grilling steaks, sipping bourbon, playing cards, traveling with friends, spending family time at the lake and enjoying his favorite Hershey's Milk Chocolate bars and Hostess Ding Dongs.

He was a prolific storyteller of his life experiences as his life was rugged, active, and compelling. J.R. served on the county soil conservation district, township planning commission and was a building inspector and a licensed real estate appraiser. Well into his 90s, Floyd still worked full time at the family firm totaling a 76-year run, read several newspapers daily and managed multiple properties and investments, his abilities and work ethic belying his age.

The family is eternally grateful to J.R. 's neighbors, Pattie Behnke and the late Sue Barnes, who delivered him home-cooked meals for a dozen years, as well as the exceptionally caring staff at both Corewell Hospital in St. Joseph and the Hanson Hospice Center.

Graveside services with military honors will be held at 1:00 PM on Saturday, March 21, 2026, at Riverside Cemetery, 400 Riverside Dr, Dowagiac. A Memorial Gathering will follow the burial from 3:00-6:00 PM at Clark Chapel – Starks Family Funeral Homes, 405 Center St, Dowagiac. In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions in J.R. 's name may be directed to the benefit of Corewell Health Merlin & Carolyn Hanson Hospice Center, 4382 Cleveland Ave., Stevensville, MI 49127.

Please share a memory of J.R. or leave condolences to his family at www.clarkch.com.

Eunice E. Bell

July 11, 1945 – March 3, 2026

Eunice E. Bell, 80 of Dowagiac, passed away Tuesday, March 3, 2026, likely with a to-do list still in mind. She was born in Vandalia, on July 11, 1945 to Glenn and Ada (Smeltzer) Hartzell. She grew up in Jones, alongside her older brother Louie, developing the determination and independence that would define her life.

Eunice graduated from Marcellus High School in 1963 and later married Richard Bell on New Year's Eve 1980. They shared nearly three decades together until his passing in 2010. Eunice worked for many years at Ausra Equipment Co. and Creative Foam, but retirement didn't slow her down one bit. A proud member of the Dowagiac Moose Lodge 933, she was always on the move – visiting friends and family. Eunice enjoyed taking motorcycle rides and spending time with her close friend, John Boyce. She also enjoyed shopping, traveling the area, listening to local bands and working in her yard.

She firmly believed that if something needed done, she could do it herself – including shoveling snow and climbing onto the roof to clear leaves (whether anyone approved or not). She never met a stranger, thanks to her legendary gift of gab. A quick trip to the store could easily turn into a two-hour social event. Her laughter, stories, and strong opinions will be deeply missed and lovingly remembered.

Eunice leaves behind her children, Denise (Dennis) Juday, Daryl Keesler (Julie Tavrides), Jason (Kerri) Bell, and Robert Bell (Tosha Atiah); Grandchildren, Jeremy (Hannah) Juday, Jordan (Allison) Juday, and Madalyn Bell (Miles Barilla); and her great-granddaughter Luella Juday, along with many dear friends.

The family would like you to join them for a Celebration of Eunice's life and dinner on Friday, March 13, 2026 from 4:00 p.m. until 7:00 p.m. in the Dowagiac Moose, 54867 M-51, Dowagiac. Eunice will be laid to rest in Plum Grove Cemetery in Union, next to her husband and her parents. Arrangements have been entrusted to Wagner Family Funerals Connelly Chapel, Cassopolis.

after San Diego's successful Resident Leadership Academy. Community health assessments continue to highlight the need for safer spaces, healthier food options, stronger community connections and more opportunities for residents to help shape neighborhood solutions.

The Community Leadership Academy is now accepting applications for its second cohort for residents who are at least 18 years old and live in the 49120 and 49107 area zip codes.

Participants build practical skills connected to neighborhood well-being, including healthy food systems; safety and violence prevention; land use and active transportation; advocacy; as well as problem-solving and decision-making.

Each cohort completes a Community Improvement Project – such as planting a community garden or launching a tool sharing program.

The first cohort, launched in the fall of 2025, brought 12 Benton Harbor residents together to address an immediate community need by developing a Community Improvement Project focused on youth gun violence. That work helped shape the Youth Gun Violence Summit scheduled for June 26.

"This experience gave me the tools and skills to make a real difference. We're not just talking about change – we're creating it together," said Cori Burton, a cohort participant.

Those who take part in the academy can expect 12 weeks of interactive Wednesday evening sessions. Applications are open now through March 20, and can be submitted at behealthyberrien.org/cla.

and Oak Streets as well as on Days Avenue in the central business district.

McGhee said this is different than the social district the city created in the downtown. The social district allows people to carry alcoholic drinks as they walk through the downtown but doesn't allow liquor to be served outside as this new ordinance will.

Other items

In other business-related news, commissioners lauded a number of new ventures.

The former Rite Aid building at Front Street and Skyline Drive will soon become an Auto Zone store. In addition, there are reports the Michigan Secretary of State office will relocate temporarily from downtown Niles to a building on East Front Street, while the Niles site is being renovated.

Commissioners also heard Monday from Dennis Mori of Buchanan Business Boosters. They are sponsoring a Lucky Ducky Kids Festival on Saturday morning and are also putting out a new flyer highlighting downtown businesses.

Commissioners approved marijuana permit renewals for Redbud Roots, bought material for cold patch this spring and approved a software purchase to convert BS&A and community development modules to the cloud. The total cost for the conversion is expected to be $38,205 and has been budgeted.

Petra Parm of Redbud Roots answered questions about the permit renewals which are for adult use processing and growing and medical marijuana growing for locations on Post Road and Terre Coupe Street. She said they have no plans to sell their business and said they would address odor concerns from nearby residents.

The cold patch material is being bought from Saginaw Paving Company at a total cost of $7,500 for 50 tons. McGhee said the goal is to patch up potholes as best they can at least temporarily with the cold patch before hot patch is available.

McGhee also reported administrative assistant Emma Lysy has been promoted to deputy clerk/administrative coordinator and will be in charge of communications and procurement activities. He also noted that Clerk Kalla Langston-Weiss has been nominated as a finalist for the Michigan Municipal Clerk of the Year award.

Langston-Weiss reported there are vacancies on a number of city commissions and people can apply on the city's website. There are vacancies on the planning commission, the zoning board of appeals, the construction board of appeals and the Buchanan Area Recreation Board.

happened over the weekend. Our district crisis team put a good plan in place. Heritage Southwest provided resources and came in on Saturday as well to ensure all of our buildings were covered. We have counselors, social workers, student support specialists, and school psychologists on hand across the district to support our students. I've even been grateful to our neighboring districts in Berrien County that reached out offering support. It's as close to normal as we can get while providing for those struggling and grieving."

A united response

In response to the devastating tornadoes that struck Cass, St. Joseph and Branch counties on Friday, the United Way of Southwest Michigan has activated the Southwest Michigan Cares Fund to support recovery efforts across the impacted region.

United Way of Southwest Michigan specifically serves Berrien, Cass and Van Buren counties, but often works with neighboring United Way agencies in disaster relief efforts where necessary. Dollars raised from Cares Fund donations will go back to the United Way organizations serving the hardest hit areas including Three Rivers, served by St. Joseph County United Way; Union City, served by Branch County United Way; and Edwardsburg, served by United Way of Southwest Michigan.

The storms killed four people, injured at least a dozen others, and left a trail of destruction through communities including Edwardsburg, Three Rivers and Union City. Homes and businesses were damaged or destroyed, thousands of residents lost power, and Cass County declared a local state of emergency.

Michigan Gov. Gretchen Whitmer activated the state's Emergency Operations Center to coordinate the response over the weekend.

The Southwest Michigan Cares Fund was established specifically for moments like this, United Way officials said. Donations made to the fund will be distributed to local organizations and community partners working on the front lines of recovery – ensuring resources reach the people and places that need them most. United Way of Southwest Michigan will work in close coordination with the American Red Cross and United Way sister agencies throughout the region to guide those efforts.

"The Southwest Michigan region was hit hard (Friday), and the road to recovery will not be short for our neighbors," said Anna Murphy, president & CEO of United Way of Southwest Michigan, in a news release. "United Way of Southwest Michigan is committed to working alongside our United Way partners to make sure every dollar donated to the Southwest Michigan Cares Fund reaches the people and communities that need it most. If you are able to give, please give. If you are able to volunteer, please sign up. And if you need help, please reach out to 211."

How to help

For readers wanting to help, United Way of Southwest Michigan has established a disaster recovery fund dedicated exclusively to assisting families impacted by the storm. Donations can be made at southwestmichigancares.com.

Donations can be directed specifically to support Edwardsburg Public Schools families or Cass County families (via the donation memo line) and for all families across Southwest Michigan who have been impacted. At this time, unrestricted cash donations are the most beneficial, as they allow response teams and case managers to provide the most flexible and immediate support where it is needed most.

Families within Edwardsburg Public Schools who were impacted by the storm will be contacted directly by school administration regarding support and assistance coordinated through After the Storm.

For those who wish to make donations outside of cash contributions, please contact Laura Croff at croffl@michigan.gov. She will assist in coordinating and directing those efforts appropriately. Please also contact Laura Croff with requests to volunteer, as she will coordinate those efforts.

Szucs said the district has been overwhelmed by the outpouring of support it has received as it continues to work to support the community.

"It has been tremendous. Even our extended "Eddie" community of former graduates has reached out from across the state saying that if anything is needed, they want to help. It really shows you what a tight-knit community Edwardsburg is. We've been dealing with a lot of heartbreak, but it's also been amazing to see the outpouring of support for our impacted families … I'm just so thankful for everybody. We've had people reach out from across the country. We are overwhelmed with the kindness, the support, and the love for all of our families."

Local men sentenced to prison on CSC charges

By DEBRA HAIGHT

CASSOPOLIS — Two area men have been sentenced to prison in Cass County Circuit Court on criminal sexual conduct related charges.

Michael Joseph Ward, 40, of Edwardsburg, pleaded guilty to first-degree criminal sexual conduct and was sentenced to 10 years to 40 years in prison. He has credit for 138 days already served and must pay $1,048 in fines and costs. He must register as a sex offender, submit to lifetime electronic monitoring and not have contact with anyone under age 18.

The incident occurred last year in Cass County against a five year old girl whose family contacted police last June. The 10 year prison sentence came as a result of a plea agreement that kept Ward from having to serve a mandatory term of 25 years in prison.

"At age 40, he has entered the heart of darkness," Cass County Prosecutor Victor Fitz said. "His repeated molestations of five year old girl is pure evil. He has a mindset of deep depravity, he has earned this 10 years in prison.

"If he does get out at some point, he needs to stay away from children," Fitz added. "This has changed life of this young child permanently and he needs to be punished for that."

Defense attorney Horia Neagos said that Ward has been "exceptionally remorseful" and agreed to plead in the case so that the young victim wouldn't have to testify and be further traumatized.

"He has not made any excuses," he said.

Cass County Circuit Court Judge Mark Herman said that Ward should consider himself fortunate that he wasn't getting a 25 year sentence.

"I'm sure you don't consider yourself overly fortunate, but you did receive a benefit," he said. "You spared the girl from testifying and that's the only decent thing you've done."

Meeting an underage girl on Snapchat and bringing her to stay in his home for three months proved to be a bad move for a Niles man. Nathaniel Alexander Peters was sentenced to prison recently in Cass County Circuit Court.

Peters, 25, of Leet Road near Niles, pleaded guilty to third degree criminal sexual conduct against a person 13 to 15 years old and was sentenced to 10 to 15 years in prison with credit for 147 days served and $1,048 in fines and costs. He must register as a sex offender and have no contact with anyone under age 18.

Peters was arrested last October after police came to his trailer to investigate a missing Alma, Michigan teen. The teen who was 14 said that she had met Peters on Snapchat and that he brought her to his home where they had sexual relations over three months. She also said they had shared sexually explicit photos and videos.

Fitz acknowledged that Peters had had a difficult childhood with his mother killing his father and being abused himself.

"He hasn't had the easiest of lives but he has to become a man and be responsible for his actions," he said. "He changed her life forever and took her away from her parents."

Defense attorney Nicholas Hogue asked for a lower prison sentence, noting Peters' childhood and untreated psychological problems.

"He has two young children, the trajectory of his life is not fixed in stone," he said. "The question is not if there should be accountability, there should be, but his need for a structured rehabilitation and treatment."

"I have had a lot of time to think about what I'd say to you," Peters told Judge Herman. "What I did was wrong, I can't lie. I just ask that you show mercy and forgiveness. I should have thought about my kids, but I didn't realize what I had until it was gone."

"You need to think about your kids when you're involved in incidents like this," Judge Herman said. "How would you feel if this happened to one of your children?"

"You said she told you she was 19 and you brought her here for sex," the judge added. "Once you met, you would know she's not 19. She had been there for three months. You also admitted you had sexually explicit photos and videos."

Judge Herman said he was concerned about Peters' past record as both a juvenile and adult. He noted that Peters was sentenced to prison as a teen, paroled at age 21 and now has a pending charge in Berrien County for failing to register as a sex offender.

"It looks like you don't care about the law or what society expects," the judge said. "You drove three hours to pick up a 14 year old girl. You had six hours to think about your decision and we can see what direction you took. You will do what you want to do whether it's right or wrong."

"You've spent half of your life as a sexual deviant," he added. "You're a grown man. You went to Alma and took her to your camper and kept her from her family. We here in Michigan find your actions inexcusable and reprehensible. Prison is the only alternative to protect society you're your predatory behavior."

A sign in a Kwik Trip store shows the store will no longer be using pennies to give change, on Oct. 23 in Yorkville, Wis.

Months after the last of the United States' 1-cent coins were pressed, some states are beginning to offer their own 2 cents on the penny problem by setting rounding guidance for cash purchases.

President Donald Trump announced early last year an end to penny production, saying it was wasteful. It cost 3.7 cents to make each 1-cent coin in 2024, according to the U.S. Mint. The move led to a shortage of pennies in cash registers last summer, forcing consumers and businesses to confront a penniless future in which making exact change would be difficult.

The Treasury Department has said it will continue circulating the roughly 114 billion pennies that exist for "as long as possible." Pennies must still be accepted as payment.

One solution to the penny problem is rounding to the nearest nickel, using a practice called symmetrical rounding. If the final price, after taxes, ends in one, two, six or seven cents, payment in cash rounds down. For example, $1.91 or $1.92 becomes $1.90. If the price ends in three, four, eight or nine, cash payment rounds up. For $1.98 or $1.99, the consumer pays $2.

A bill introduced last year in Congress and passed out of the House financial services committee would apply symmetrical rounding across the country. U.S. Rep. Lisa McClain, R-Mich., said in an email the federal law is important to prevent a "confusing patchwork of state policies."

The bill hasn't been voted on in the House and would still need to move through the U.S. Senate before reaching Trump's desk.

Some states are looking to what's next

In the meantime, bills to deal with penniless cash transactions have passed both chambers and await the governor's signature in Arizona, Florida, Oregon, Tennessee, Virginia and Washington. Some states are proposing to allow businesses to round cash purchases, while others consider requiring it.

In Indiana, a bill signed into law this month by Republican Gov. Mike Braun tells businesses they must round cash purchases for all transactions that do not end in a zero or five. Lawmakers revised that provision in a second bill that makes rounding optional, which would take effect Sunday if Braun signs it into law.

In both bills, Indiana businesses can choose to always round cash purchases up to the nearest nickel, always round down or round up or down depending on the amount.

In Republican-led Tennessee, legislation makes symmetrical rounding exempt from legal claims under a state consumer protection law but does not require rounding.

"It is to provide safe harbor for private businesses," said Republican Rep. Charlie Baum, the bill sponsor in Tennessee, during floor debate.

Rounding bills have been introduced in about two dozen states since late last year, according to an Associated Press analysis using the bill-tracking service Plural.

Outside of lawmaking bodies, some state agencies have published guidelines to advise that rounding should happen after tax, and that businesses must make sure the full taxed amount still goes to the state.

Will consumers pay more with rounding?

Cash isn't used as ubiquitously since the rise in electronic payment methods. Still, about 8 in 10 U.S. adults said they recently used cash in a 2024 survey conducted by the Federal Reserve. Cash was more often used by older adults and those in lower-income households.

The Treasury wrote online that prices would be "rounded down just as often as they will be rounded up, so there should be no overall effect on consumer prices."

But researchers at the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond used a 2023 survey to show prices that didn't end in zero or five were especially likely to end in eight or nine. Payment amounts could be different when multiple items are purchased or depending on the tax rate, but overall, prices more often being rounded up would lead to millions of dollars gained by businesses and lost by consumers collectively, amounting to a few pennies lost per person.

Do people think it's fair?

As businesses have introduced rounding, some Americans have taken to social media to say they feel scammed, even if it is a penny or two at a time.

Nikki Capozzo-Hennessy, 50, said she tends to pay in cash because it makes her more conscious of her spending. The Trumbull, Connecticut, resident posted her grocery store receipt online when she noticed the rounding adjustment on a purchase of $8.73, with tax. The store chose to round down and she gained three cents.

Capozzo-Hennessy said it might feel taxing if she had to hand over extra pennies every time, but she also thinks it's practical to stick with one rule. She runs a food truck business and said they'd likely use symmetrical rounding to be consistent.

"At the end of the day it's three cents, but I can imagine with all the purchases that you make, it can add up," Capozzo-Hennessy said.

Washington state Rep. April Berg, who introduced a rounding bill there, said she understands people who feel frustrated losing a penny but that the elimination of the hard currency leaves little option.

"We did make sure that everyone is allowed to pay exactly what they owe," Berg said of her legislation.

What about the nickel?

The Treasury says ceasing penny production will save $56 million annually, but rounding could increase demand for nickels. The 5-cent coins also are costly to make, reaching nearly 14 cents each in 2024, according to the Mint.

The proposed federal legislation currently includes a potential cost-saving solution, allowing the Treasury to adjust the coin's composition to use cheaper zinc and nickel instead of copper and nickel.

Constant technology changes throw seniors a curve – and add to caregivers' load

By DEBALEENA CHATTOPADHYAY
Assistant Professor of Computer Science, University of Illinois Chicago (The Conversation)

THE CONVERSATION

This past Christmas, I helped my parents choose a water filter. The latest "smart" models all came with a smartphone app that promised to monitor filter life, track water quality and automatically request service. Yet my father, age 75, and mother, 67, were quick to reject them in favor of a nondigital model.

"Every time it updates or I forget how to use it, we'll have to call you," my dad said.

As an only child living 8,000 miles (12,875 kilometers) away, I didn't need convincing. My parents are aging in place and don't need traditional caregiving – they cook, drive and manage their home just fine. Instead, I provide what I call technology caregiving: helping them with their digital activities of daily living, from online banking to booking theater tickets.

But as the tech industry shifts toward artificial intelligence agents and generative user interfaces – promising to make devices smarter than ever – I am bracing for this invisible workload to become heavier, not lighter. In addition to being a technology caregiver, I'm a computer scientist who studies human-computer interaction.

Technology caregiving

Technology caregiving is the act of helping someone use digital tools. While this isn't entirely new – people have long helped grandparents program VCRs and connect parents' desktop computers to the internet – the stakes have changed.

Today, digitization is ubiquitous. Helping with these tools is no longer just occasional unpaid tech support – it is a form of continuous caregiving essential for maintaining independence. For example, even the simple act of clipping coupons has gone digital – marginalizing older adults who are unable to navigate store apps to access these discounts.

People often view older adults as resistant to technology, but recent years – particularly since the COVID-19 pandemic – have shattered that myth. While gaps in internet access and device ownership remain, they are no longer major barriers to technology access.

The emerging crisis is not about access, but effective use. Many older adults are now online and willing to use these tools, but they require frequent help from family, friends or communities.

The innovation tax

The problem isn't just that devices and apps are getting complex; it's that they are constantly changing. Frequent software updates and shifting interfaces can be frustrating for all users, but they turn familiar tools into foreign concepts for older adults.

This unpredictability is about to accelerate. Take generative user interfaces, which designers can use to dynamically generate an interface in minutes. Pair them with AI agents, and the system can assume the designer's role, taking independent actions based on how it perceives a user's intent or need.

If the "Pay Bill" button is in a different place every third time you open a particular app because an AI decided to optimize the interface, you might feel perpetually incompetent if you can't quickly locate it. While the industry calls this personalization, for an older adult it is a moving target.

This relentless pace of change – even when intended to be helpful – is directly at odds with age-related cognitive changes. And this dynamic is continuing with the new generation of seniors. They may be more eager to adopt new tools than the last, but wanting to use technology is not the same as being able to use it when the rules are constantly changing.

To navigate a brand new or shifting interface, your brain relies on fluid intelligence: the ability to reason, solve novel problems and ignore distractions on the fly. Unlike the knowledge that people accumulate over time, fluid intelligence naturally declines with age.

When an app updates or an AI optimizes a layout, it forces the user to discard their hard-won mental models and start over. For an older adult, this isn't just a minor inconvenience; it is a taxing job for their working memory.

As an older adult participant in a study my colleagues and I conducted put it:

"I had a computer on my desk in 1980, OK, when nobody else did. So this is not a foreign language, but the changes that are made with little to no explanation and then things that you knew how to do have either changed or disappeared completely, that is the stuff that absolutely drives me, and I will tell you, every other older adult in America nuts."

Help the helper

I believe that the way forward is to stop treating tech support as an afterthought and start designing for the technology caregiver. Digital literacy training for seniors and encouraging designing technologies for all users are important but not enough; it's important to build tools that share the burden.

Two promising paths are emerging. First, cognitive accessibility features – like AI assistants that find buried buttons or provide real-time tech support – can offload tasks from the caregiver. Second, tools for caregivers are beginning to move beyond simply controlling device feature access to capabilities such as allowing authorized access for banking as co-users, or recording personalized instructions.

These tools will also need to be tailored: Family caregivers need different tools than community helpers like libraries and senior centers.

In the age of AI, innovation shouldn't be a tax on the aging brain – it should help bridge the digital divide.

Bird losses are accelerating across North America, particularly in farming regions where agriculture is most intensive

By FRANÇOIS LEROY
Postdoctoral Researcher in Ecology, The Ohio State University (The Conversation)

THE CONVERSATION

Since the 1970s, the U.S. has lost billions of birds. We now know that those losses aren't just growing – they are accelerating in places with intensive human activity, particularly where agriculture and expanding communities are changing the landscape.

Bird population declines have been closely linked to pollution, use of chemicals and physical changes to their habitats.

But human pressures on nature are not just continuing; they are increasing at an accelerating rate. Indicators of human activity, such as population growth, economic growth and transportation use, rose more rapidly after the 1950s, as did measures of environmental change, from atmospheric carbon dioxide levels to tropical forest loss.

In a new study published in the journal Science, my colleagues and I found that bird populations are responding in the same way: Their declines are speeding up, particularly in regions dominated by intensive agriculture.

It's not just that there are fewer birds each year. In some places, each year brings larger losses than the one before.

Where bird populations are shrinking faster

Using data from the North American Breeding Bird Survey, we analyzed bird population changes for 261 species across the contiguous U.S. between 1987 and 2021.

We found that, on average, bird numbers declined by about 15 percent – for every six birds in 1987, there were only five three decades later. Nearly half of the species we examined showed significant population declines, with the strongest declines observed for the common grackle, the European starling and the red-winged blackbird.

The North American Breeding Bird Survey is one of the longest-running wildlife monitoring programs in the world. Since 1969, trained volunteers have counted birds along thousands of fixed routes across the U.S. and Canada during the breeding season, when birds are reproducing, nesting, laying eggs or raising young.

Because the survey spans decades, a continent and hundreds of species, it provides an unparalleled window into how bird populations are changing over time.

Most studies using this data focus on whether populations are increasing or decreasing. In our study, we asked a different question: Are those trends themselves speeding up or slowing down?

When we examined how the decline of birds evolved over time, a striking pattern emerged.

The losses were strongest in southern parts of the United States – a pattern consistent with previous research that linked bird declines to warm and warming regions. Many species have been found to struggle in hotter temperatures, or they shift their ranges toward cooler climates.

The Midwest, California and parts of the Mid-Atlantic region stood out as areas where bird declines are accelerating. Populations that were already shrinking in the late 1980s are now losing birds more rapidly than they did three decades ago.

These regions share a common feature: intensive agriculture. We measured agricultural intensity using indicators such as cropland area, fertilizer application and pesticide use around survey locations. Areas with higher agricultural intensity were more likely to have accelerating bird declines.

Why agriculture intensity can amplify decline

Modern agriculture transforms landscapes. Large cropland areas replace diverse habitats. Herbicides and pesticides used on farms reduce weeds and insects that many bird species depend on for food. Heavy machinery and reduced habitat diversity can limit nesting opportunities.

We cannot disentangle which agricultural practices are most responsible for the accelerating declines. Fertilizer use, pesticide application and land-use change often occur together. It is likely that multiple pressures interact to affect birds. However, studies have linked higher pesticide use to reductions in bird numbers, both directly through toxicity and indirectly through declines in insect prey. These findings suggest that chemicals may play an important role in amplifying population declines in agricultural regions.

We also found that agricultural intensity and temperature change may reinforce each other. Agricultural landscapes often lack shade trees, so they warm more than natural areas, potentially compounding climate-related stress on bird populations.

Why acceleration matters

Accelerating population declines are an early warning sign about birds' well-being. A steady decline is concerning, but when losses grow larger year after year, it means the situation is getting worse faster.

Monitoring acceleration can help identify emerging hot spots before populations reach low levels, providing an early warning for conservation action.

Birds are more than just familiar backyard species. They help control insect pests, disperse seeds and regulate ecosystems. Because they are well monitored and sensitive to environmental change, they often provide an early indication of broader ecological shifts.

Nearly 40 percent of U.S. land is used for agriculture. How these landscapes are managed will shape the future for many birds, and farmers are thus at the forefront to address the biodiversity crisis. It's also important to remember that agricultural workers themselves are the most exposed to the same chemicals that affect ecosystems, and a growing body of research has examined the health implications of pesticide exposure. Balancing food production, environmental sustainability and human health is a shared challenge.

Biodiversity responses to land management changes can occur quickly. So when habitats are restored or chemical pressures are reduced, birds and insects can return within years.

That potential for relatively rapid ecological recovery makes agricultural landscapes especially important. Our findings suggest that looking not only at how much biodiversity is changing, but also at how much those changes are speeding up, may offer a clearer picture of the pressures facing wildlife today.

Cassopolis grad to perform at Merriman's Playhouse on March 28

By PMG STAFF

SOUTH BEND — Jazz saxophonist and Cassopolis graduate Seth Kalina will present a live performance at Merriman's Playhouse in downtown South Bend on March 28, featuring vocalist Andrew Fisher. The concert will showcase music famously performed and composed by legendary saxophonist John Coltrane.

Kalina, a longtime presence in the South Bend jazz community, returns to Merriman's Playhouse after years of attending and performing at its weekly jazz jam sessions since the age of 15.

"This venue played a huge role in my development as a musician," Kalina said. "It's incredibly meaningful to bring my own project back to this stage."

The quintet is composed of five student musicians, ages 19 to 20, all enrolled in Michigan State University's prestigious jazz studies program led by award-winning bassist Rodney Whitaker. The ensemble will be joined by Andrew Fisher, a vocalist based in Southwest Michigan known for his annual Stevie Wonder tribute concerts and jazz performances throughout the region.

Seth Kalina is a jazz saxophonist currently studying at Michigan State University under Erena Terakubo, Randy Napoleon, and Rodney Whitaker, with prior mentorship from Walter Blanding and Leo Schlaifer. He has been performing professionally since the age of 14 and has collaborated with numerous local and regional artists.

The company is also contracted to work on monthly calls, annual planning and PR related to grant programs, in addition to active media relations, Miller said. According to Miller, this contract also means there are three people from Sabo ready to help at any time of day. He called it "bench strength."

Previously, Harrison said a health department employee did this work, but that person left during the COVID-19 pandemic. This company has been doing the work since.

"Rather than bring somebody back in, they just entered into this contract," Harrison said. "That's actually been a reduction in cost for the county (from) what we were paying when you add in the salary and benefits to the employee."

Sabo was acquired by parent company Allan-Droog holdings, which is named in the resolution.

This agreement also came up during a Berrien County Board of Health meeting earlier this month.

The Brandywine girls basketball team poses with their regional championship trophy.

Price sisters power Brandywine to third straight regional title

By MAXWELL HARDEN
max.harden@leaderpub.com

BANGOR — The Prices were right for the Brandywine girls basketball team Wednesday night.

Sisters Mackenna and Zaya Price combined for 37 points in the Bobcats' 62-50 win over Kalamazoo Christian Wednesday to win the program's third straight Division 3 Regional Championship at Bangor High School. The win was also win No. 500 for Brandywine Head Coach Josh Hood.

Zaya led all scorers with 24 points and Mackenna had 13 points while Karleigh Byrd and Lily Gill scored 16 and 9 respectively.

"That's really what makes this group special, Hood said. "One night it's McKenna, one night it's Zaya, one night it's Karleigh Byrd. Brooke has led us in scoring before. When you can share the ball and the scoring comes from everywhere, it's hard to focus on this Brandywine team. When you get a group of kids that play for the name on the front, not the back, they know nobody has to be a superstar. They play for this program and this community, and that's why we've had this success."

The Prices scored 18 of Brandywine's first 22 points as the Comets struggled against Brandywine's pace on offense and pressure on defense. The Bobcats led by as many as 19 in the second quarter and took a 36-23 lead into halftime. The second half began much like the first with a Zaya Price basket to go up 38-25. The Bobcats pushed their lead back to 19 in the third and led 47-32 entering the fourth quarter.

The Comets pulled within single digits when a Lily Manion 3 made it a 55-46 game late in the fourth quarter but was not able get any closer.

"We had a lot of energy to push our team to do what we've been doing throughout the entire season," Mackenna said. "We know that once we got that first bucket, we had the flow of the game. We could control it, and we were definitely in control."

All-Stater Ella Vandusen led Kalamazoo Christian with 16 points and Reese Gernaat had 12 points and Manion eight. Despite having a size advantage in the front court, the Comets had no answer for Zaya – who scored 12 of her 24 in the first quarter – in the low post.

"I started working this summer on playing in the post. I love it because I get more opportunities to shoot and score—it's just a better position."

Mackenna has enjoyed playing with her younger sister this season and believes they bring out the best in each other.

Hood said the decision to utilize Zaya in the post more was made following the Brandywine's 55-44 loss to Otsego, its lone loss of the season.

"That Otsego game was an eye-opener for a lot of us. It started with the

Giants re-sign Murphy

By PMG STAFF

MURPHY

NEW YORK — The Giants have re-signed outside linebacker Caleb Murphy, the team announced Tuesday.

The former Dowagiac standout, who was acquired off waivers by the Giants late last season from the Patriots, was set to become an exclusive rights free agent when the new league year begins at 4 p.m. Wednesday. The terms of the deal were not disclosed.

Murphy, 6-3 and 254 pounds, has played in 19 career games for the Titans (2023-24), Chargers (2024-25), and Patriots (2025).

He did not appear in a game with the Giants after joining the team on Dec. 16.

Murphy appeared in 11 games last season with the Chargers and Patriots and registered seven tackles, one quarterback hit, a half-sack and seven special teams tackles.

Before going undrafted in 2023, he played in 29 games in two seasons at Ferris State (2020-22) after beginning his collegiate career at Grand Valley State (2019).

Murphy totaled 156 tackles, 60.5 tackles for loss, 40.0 sacks, and eight forced fumbles at Ferris State and helped the team win consecutive Division II National Championships.

In 2022, his 25.5 sacks set the NCAA single-season record while his 39 tackles for loss tied another mark. Murphy also became the first non-FBS player to win the Ted Hendricks award, given to the nation's top defensive end.

Victorious Vikings

Niles beats Berrien Springs, earns first district title since 2018

By MAXWELL HARDEN
max.harden@leaderpub.com

Maxwell Harden / Leader Publications
The Niles Vikings celebrate winning the Division 2 district title against Berrien Springs Friday at Niles High School.

NILES — The Niles girls basketball team gave the home crowd plenty to celebrate last week.

The Vikings rallied from a 10-point deficit and rolled to a 69-53 win over Berrien Springs Friday, March 6 to claim the Division 2 district title, their first since 2018. The Vikings advanced to the regional semifinals where they fell to Otsego 70-39.

"You have no idea how incredibly proud I am," Workman said. "We faced a lot of adversity. It's been about two and a half years with this group. It's been quite the ride; they bought into the culture and they worked really hard. We definitely made it happen. I'm so proud of them."

Trailing 27-17 midway through the second quarter, Elynne Hoyt sparked a 10-3 run to trim the deficit to 30-27 at halftime. The Vikings kept the momentum going into the third quarter, with a Maddie Zache 3-pointer giving the Vikings a 34-32 lead they would not relinquish. Niles outscored Berrien Springs 24-11 in the quarter to take a 51-41 lead into the fourth.

"We started experiencing breakdowns before halftime," said Berrien Springs Coach Rodney Alexander. "We had some injuries come up but we had some mental breakdowns. The third quarter was the game."

Tanaya Brown continued the Vikings' strong play with a fast break lay-in to push the lead to 53-41. The senior scored six of her 14 points in the fourth quarter to help the Vikings extend their lead to as many as 18 in the fourth.

"I think we really worked as a team in this game," Hoyt said. "Everyone was able to step up and make big plays and at the end of the day, we just wanted it more."

Workman was impressed with Brown and Gianna Ball's defensive effort against Zion Ellis, who scored six of her 20 points in the second half.

"We started to deny her and tried to eliminate her and their offense as much as possible. Tayana and Gianna did a wonderful job of that, and I really liked the steals," Workman said. "We also went into our press and that led to a lot more great opportunities."

"We saw our chance and we wanted it – It was ours from the get-go," Brown said. "Our heads were in the game today."

For Brown and fellow seniors, the win was a culmination of four years of hard work. After winning nine games total the previous three years, including a winless season in 2022-23, the Vikings have won 13 games and counting, the program's most since 2014.

"It means a lot," Brown said. "The girls and I worked hard and we did this for us."

After scoring 29 in a win over Lakeshore in the semifinals, Hoyt followed up that performance with a game-high 27 points in the district championship game.

"This is what you dream about," Hoyt said. "This is what you work for and I'm so excited that I was able to do this."

"She's a dawg," Workman said. " She truly is an all-around amazing kid and an all-around amazing player. I'm extremely comfortable with her. She's a "next play" type of girl; if she makes a mistake, she'll move on to the next one and give us something new."

Ali Gerrits had 10 for Niles and Jessie Thornton added seven points. Kathryn Bergan had 14 for Berrien Springs while Adeline Weber added 11.

The loss brings the Shamrocks' season to an end with a 12-11 record. While disappointed with the outcome, Alexander is proud of the growth his team has achieved this season. Ellis eclipsed the 1,000-point plateau and Bergan made first team all-conference while leading the Shamrocks to their third straight district championship game appearance.

"We've been through a lot," he said. "We lost a lot last year and improved this year. We have a lot of freshmen so the future is bright. We brought the culture back."

Workman, one of the area's most decorated prep basketball players, returned to coach her alma mater to raise the Vikings back to prominence. While there is more work to be done, Workman is proud of the progress her team has made in three years.

""It means a lot. I played here, I won four district championships here," she said. "It's something that is necessary and they deserve it. They put in a lot of time, effort, and work."

"Coach made us who we are today and she did it for us," Brown said. "She made us better."

The victory continues a special season for the Niles' basketball teams, with the boys and girls winning district titles in the same season for the first time since 2003. The Vikings hope to continue their run Monday against regional host Otsego. The Wolverine Conference champions swept the Vikings during the regular season but that was then. This is now.

"We're just going to keep our heads down and keep working and keep making the adjustments we need to make and keep plugging away," Workman said. "The big thing is just competing and these girls deserve that."

Otsego 70, Niles 39

A poor start ended Niles' girls basketball season Monday night.

No. 9-ranked Otsego raced out to a quick 13-1 lead and coasted past the Vikings 70-39 in the Division 2 regional semifinals.

Playing on its home floor, the Wolverine Conference champ Otsego used its pressure defense to frustrate Niles all night long. The Bulldogs forced 28 Viking turnovers, using them to score 24 easy points, while advancing to Wednesday's regional title game against No. 1-ranked Grand Rapids South Christian (25-0).

Otsego, which beat Niles 49-30 and 78-32 during the regular season, led 30-13 at halftime and the game never got closer than that in the second half. The Bulldogs led by as many as 36.

Audrey Lingbeek led Otsego with 16 points, including four 3-pointers. Brook Smallmon added 12.

Niles had Jessie Thornton and Tanaya Brown with 13 points apiece. But Elynne Hoyt, who had games of 29 and 27 in the two Viking district wins, was limited to three. Hoyt did grab eight rebounds.

Thornton did end her career with 1,042 points.

Niles finished 13-12 and has improved dramatically during Sarah Workman's three years as coach. The Vikings were 0-22 in 2023. Niles ended 2-20 in 2024, Workman's first year and improved to 7-17 a year ago, before closing out the best season at the school since 2014.

Workman will have some reloading to do next year. The Vikings graduate Thornton, Brown, Maddie Zache and Ali Gerrits from its top seven.

HOOD

Hood said he does not spend much time reflecting on the number of wins his teams have piled up. He will leave that for when he retires somewhere down the road.

"All the attention should be on the girls, the Regional Champions," he said. "When I'm older one day, walking the beach with a non-alcoholic piña colada, I'll probably reflect and think this is pretty darn cool. Hopefully, my kids and grandkids can be proud of it. But right now, this is all about the Brandywine kids. 500 wins happened because of the kids we have here. I'm honored to be their coach and proud of these Regional Champions."

Hood, 48, is in his 17th season of coaching the Brandywine girls basketball team. He took an up-and-coming program, which had just come off a district championship, and turned it into a state power. Since he became the head coach in 2009, Brandywine has posted a record of 374-39, which includes 13 district championships, 10 regional titles, three trips to the state semifinals and one state finals appearance. Hood is proud of those numbers, but is quick to point out that you do not achieve that kind of success without great players and assistant coaches.

He thanked assistant coaches Kalie Wieger, Frelen Gowen, Mackenzie Cass, Tammy Lee, Nicole Price and Dave Roeder for their roles in the team's success.

"In a day and age when coaches are leaving by the dozens, because coaching is hard, we've had zero parent meetings at Brandywine this year," he said. "We've had zero girls meet their parents at halftime to get instructions. I've had zero girls miss practice. I'm the luckiest coach in the world and I'm having as much fun as I've ever had. The parents let their kids be coached hard, the girls are okay with being coached hard and the end result is a well-oiled machine."

To get to 500-wins, Hood was 8-13 his one season of coaching girls at Coloma and 54-16 as the Comets' boys coach for three seasons. Hood coached both the boys and girls teams for one year at Coloma. He then went to Cassopolis to take over the Rangers' boys basketball team. At Cassopolis, Hood was 63-30 in four seasons. His total record stands at 500-98.

As a fan of Notre Dame Head Football Coach Marcus Freeman, Hood said Freeman's mantra "Choose Hard" embodies his program.

"He always says 'choose hard.' The girls that play basketball at Brandywine choose hard. We've won over 90 percent of our games in 17 years and we've never made a cut in our program. You would think people would be dying to play here and chase championships, but if you're going to play at Brandywine, you're choosing hard because you're going to work at it six or seven days a week and give everything you've got. That's why these girls are leaders in our community on and off the court."

At Brandywine, the tradition of excellence is entrenched in the community. The program is now 99-7 over the last four seasons, the most wins in a four-year stretch by any area high school basketball team. Junior guard Mackenna Price embodies that tradition as a second-generation Bobcat player along with her sister, Zaya. Her mother was a member of the programs' first Final Four appearance.

Mackenna, who scored 13 points to help the Bobcats win a regional title Wednesday, believes Hood brings out the best in her and her teammates.

"It makes me feel amazing knowing that he was the one who pushed us," she said. "We couldn't have done it without him. He pushed us very, very hard to get to where we've been all season and to where we are now. He's just a great coach overall."

While dozens of players have graduated from the program over the years, as Hood likes to say, "the standard never graduates."

"The standard never varies," he said. "Three of those starters tonight have sisters who played for me that were All-State players. The Prices, their mom was on the first Final Four team at point guard. These are legacy kids; they've been in our 'kiddy cats' program since they were born. These are 12 and 13-year players in our youth program. It's what our program does. I'm lucky to be the facilitator, but it is a network of people that make this special. For a small public school to win 10 Regional championships in 17 years says a lot about the kids and the support we have."

coach not being very good because I was playing her more on the perimeter, and [Otsego Head Coach Tony Kochar] is a great friend of mine and his team woke us up a little bit. Since Zaya has been inside, she's averaging something like 17 points and 12 rebounds a game. She is a phenomenal kid and a phenomenal talent. She's going to be one of the best to ever wear a Brandywine jersey."

"It's a struggle sometimes but we've gotten used to it so it's not too chaotic between us," Mackenna said. "We're more controlled together now. It's great; we see each other really good on the court… I give her the assists and she goes in and scores. She couldn't do it without me, and I couldn't do it without her."

The Bobcats will face Hart (16-9) at 7 p.m. Tuesday at Kalamazoo Loy Norrix High School. The Pirates defeated Kent City 51-49 in the regional finals. Hood said the team will use its six days to rest and get a game plan together.

"The thing I've always appreciated about our girls is their commitment," Hood said. "They're never content with just winning a District or a Regional. When they came to work on Saturday, they knew it was back to work because they want to be one of the top teams in Division 3 basketball."

These words, allegedly spoken by Greek philosopher Socrates in 399 B.C., were some of the first to truly shape my young mind as I embarked on a wisdom quest at Grand Valley State University.

Ryan Yuenger

The phrase still subconsciously and silently steers me through life, though every so often the words bubble to the surface like pockets of knowledge escaping from the depths of my soul.

This time, I was staring into the shimmering sunset through geometric patterns in a frozen Lake Michigan when the words of Socrates returned, hurtling me back into me into my own mind – a reflection within a reflection.

The Trial

In Plato's "Apology," he writes about the trial of his mentor Socrates, who was accused of impiety against the Athenian gods, as well as corrupting the youth of Athens with his relentless Socratic method of questioning and fostering critical thinking.

During the trial, Socrates made the claim he would rather die than change his ways.

"While I have life and strength I will never stop doing philosophy," said Socrates, according to Plato. "For my aim is to persuade you all, young and old alike, not to think about your lives or your properties, but first and foremost to care about your inner self. I tell you that wealth does not make you good within, but that from inner goodness comes wealth and every other benefit to man. This is my teaching, and if it corrupts youth, then I suppose I am their corrupter. ...

"To talk daily about what makes us good, and to question myself and others, is the greatest thing man can do. For the unexamined life is not worth living."

The Reflection

Reflections are a funny thing. Sometimes we look at our reflection in the mirror and see someone else. Sometimes we look at someone else and see a reflection of ourselves.

Averting my gaze from the setting sun, a look into the river reveals another reflection – an illuminated lighthouse beacon framed perfectly by gaps in the river ice.

It was an upside-down reminder of another Socrates-inspired phrase that often scrolls across the news ticker in my brain: The more I learn, the less I know.

With the sun below the clouds and darkness engulfing Silver Beach, my long walk home began again – but I was even more confused than before.

Perhaps its time I brushed up the teachings of Confucius for some answers. Until then, I'll keep reflecting on my own beliefs like I'm trapped in a house of mirrors.

It's what Socrates would have wanted, I think.

Outer Banks erosion reveals buried whale

By MARK PRICE
The Charlotte Observer (TNS)

Worsening beach erosion on North Carolina's Outer Banks is now being blamed for something down right creepy: Digging up a dead whale, according to coastal community leaders.

It's happening in Corolla and the Corolla Civic Association says the grave is being repeatedly uncovered and recovered at the whims of the tide.

"Approximately four years ago, a whale that washed ashore was professionally examined through a necropsy and properly buried above the high-tide line, as is standard practice. At the time, the burial location was considered safe and stable," the association wrote in a March 4 Facebook post.

"However, the ongoing loss of beach volume has now allowed erosion to uncover portions of that burial site. The result is exactly what one might expect from a four-year-old whale carcass reappearing on the beach: it stinks to high heaven. It's a strong and unpleasant reminder that the shoreline is changing."

Two humpback whales in the 28-to-38 foot range washed ashore near Corolla in 2019, and it's unclear which grave has been uncovered, according to Barbara Marzetti, president of the association's Board of Directors.

Civic leaders say the situation is "a brand-new consequence" of the erosion effecting the county's 22.6 miles of beaches. Protective dunes are vanishing and "numerous beach access stairs have been lost or damaged," the association says.

The damage has been far worse on the barrier islands to the south. Erosion has consumed entire rows of homes on Hatteras Island, with Cape Hatteras National Seashore reporting 31 beach homes destroyed since 2020.
